Advice to Anxious
Sweethearts
By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I want with a jump and a bound to tell you that I am a very happy girl. I am very happy because I am in love with a very nice fellow. I am very happy because I am in love with a very nice fellow. I am very happy because I am in love with a very nice fellow.

I THINK you were the one who should have apologized. How could you be so rude to him. You see you really had nothing to be angry about. I don't see that you can do much about it. He must know by your going to see his mother that you are anxious to be friends again.

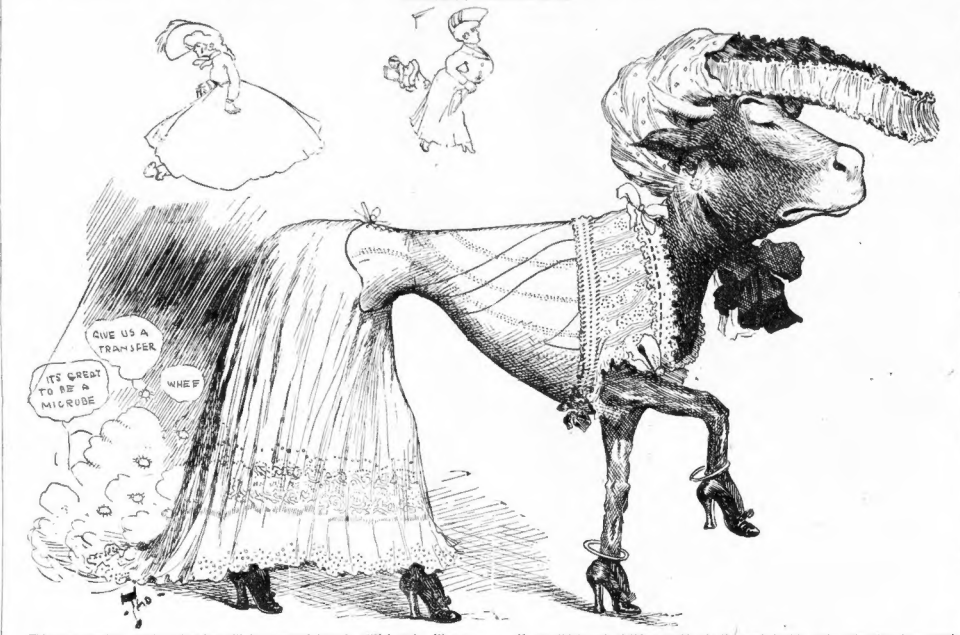

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I have a question that I am sure you can answer. I am sure you can answer it. I am sure you can answer it. I am sure you can answer it. I am sure you can answer it. I am sure you can answer it.

WOMEN, HERE IS A CARTOON FOR YOU

This poor creature, much against her will, is presented here in pitiful garb. Women, you see how she looks. You admit that it would be atrocious to rig out a cow like this. Then WHY do you dress YOURSELVES up in the fashion? Are you not more important than many cows? If you would not put such a hat or such a corset or such heels on a COW, why do you put them on your own body?

Hints on Health

DEAR PROFESSOR: I have a mouth patch that is very annoying. Is there any way I can remove it without damaging my skin?

THESE are the best ways of removing a mouth patch without irritating the skin. The skin is more than skin deep. The coloring matter that constitutes a mouth patch is deposited in the deeper portions of the subcutaneous. Most patches and moles being in the same family, as they are, they require the same treatment.

"I DIDN'T know that Mr. March was in Monte Carlo," she said. And there was a curious note in her voice, a little hesitancy.

"I suppose he will be," said Menkes. "Oh, I hope not," she answered blithely. "You don't like him?"

"I really believe I dislike him more than anyone I know."

"Why?" she asked him inquisitively. "Because I believe," said Menkes, "that Mr. March is a very good fellow."
